Civil Service Negates Home Rule Says RJB

Board Sticks With Offer

A three-member majority of the Board of Selectmen voted Monday to stick with a previous offer of $1,500 as a cash settlement for sewer easement damages to property owned by Selectman Sidney P. White.

The board initially set this figure early in the year, prior to White's election to the governing body. Before the laying of sewer line in connection with the town's 1964-65 accelerated sewer project, Andover entered into an agreement with Selectman White in exchange for an easement through his property between Reservation and Argilla Roads. The terms provided for restoration of the land involved.

White complained afterward that the restoration was not to his satisfaction and the Board then in power decided to make a cash settlement. Mr. White replied, through the town manager, that he did not consider $1,500 adequate.

Pointing out that the trunk line laid through White's property has increased the potential and value of his land for sub-division development, Manager Bowen told the board he would be concerned about setting a precedent with any larger settlement than that already contemplated. He added that White received the advantages of the trunk line without having to pay a betterment assessment. Betterment charges are not made on trunk facilities.

Selectmen Roger Collins, Robert A. Watters and Philip Allen voted unanimously to hold the line on the offer. Chairman William Stewart was absent because of the illness of his wife and White excused himself from the meeting so as not to participate in the discussion.

Manager Richard Bowen told a Blue Ribbon legislative committee in Lawrence Tuesday that he regards the Commonwealth's present Civil Service program as an inadequate alternative to political patronage.

He further stated that he opposes the imposition of state Civil Service on municipalities and added: "If home rule means anything, it means that personnel administration belongs in the hands of local authorities."

Why can't the state approve legislation that would permit municipalities to have their own personnel merit systems, he asked.

The manager was one of a number of Greater Lawrence municipal and legislative officials to speak at a public hearing called by the special commission reviewing Civil Service and other public personnel administrative matters with a view to reform. He was the only one, however, to give major consideration to features of the present CS law other than those positions relating to absolute veterans' preference.

He was preceded by Mayor Daniel Kiley Jr. of Lawrence, Sen. William X. Wall, Rep. Lawrence P. Smith and Rep. Gerard A. Gullmette, all of whom told an audience dominated by spokesmen for veterans' organizations that they oppose any change in current veterans' preference laws. Fifth district Rep. Arthur Williams of Andover was introduced and urged only that the commission give careful attention to the need for review of Civil Service regulation.

Vale Fair Announced

The Ballardvale Community Assn. will sponsor a fall fair President Ted Acosta said Tuesday in an announcement which named Bruce Taylor as chairman.

The association, Acosta said, will try to achieve the success managed by the Ballard Vale United Church which sponsored a fair in the Vale last year.

Development of a full program is getting underway. A colorful highlight will be the appearance of the Clan McPherson Scottish bagpipe band with its Highland dancers, Acosta said in reporting confirmation of an agreement with the musical group.

Tentative plans are for a dance recital by Ballardvale children, an arts and crafts exhibit, a chicken barbecue, a concert by a singing group and a variety of games and other entertainment.

The EDA requires proof that funds it lends will lead to the creation of new jobs.

Potential School Land To Be Perc Tested Soon

The town manager is to continue negotiating with the owner of some 23 acres of South Andover land sought as an addition to an elementary school site, but meanwhile percolation tests are to be taken to determine how suitable the area is for a leaching field. The property has been offered to the town for an unspecified figure and a counter offer agreed upon.

The acreage in question belongs to Robert W. M. White and borders property already held by the town off Rocky Hill Road. As recently as January, 1964, White offered the farm land to the town for $20,000. For more than a year the location of a school in this area has been debated with Town Manager Richard Bowen resisting acquisition of the White holdings because of its dubious suitability for on-site disposal.

In the interim land on Gray Road, off Salem Street, was proposed as a school site to serve the same side of town and Town Meeting authorized its acquisition. But the School Committee, and more particularly Supt. Edward I. Erickson, persisted in advising that a school located where development is already heavy and where a large number of children could walk to school would be most desirable.

Late last month the manager shifted his position and ask the Board of Selectmen for authorization to proceed with acquisition of the White or Cottage Farm land. He said he was influenced not only by the strong recommendation of the school superintendent, but also by the fact that there was a good possibility construction of a sewer line might be necessary in either event. It is his feeling that if a sewer must be constructed, it should be done in an area that fits in with the town's master sanitary sewer plan. The town has such long range plans for the area around Cottage Farm, but none will have something to look forward to in 1967.

Lewis is a strawberry expert. As the agricultural economy of Eastern Massachusetts has become less and less truck farm oriented, Lewis has profited from adapting the 20th Century concept of specialization and concentrating his skills on the production of one major crop. It isn't something he set out to do, but rather the result of his giving free rein to a boyhood urge to know more and more about strawberries.

In the beginning, Lewis was interested in growing better berries. Today he is chiefly concerned with nurturing a bumper crop of healthy, certified strawberry plants. These the West Andover farmer ships or sells direct to a flock of East Coast farmers, thereby influencing the quality of berries in a far flung territory.

From just 12 acres of land he "harvests" and ships close to 1 million strawberry plants in a season and grows also the 60,000 plants he sets out annually to supply berries for his own wholesale and retail customers.

And in order to make the most efficient use of his land and his help, Lewis also raises for sale an acre of asparagus plants and 25 acres of full grown carrots which he distributes through a string of suburban and Essex County produce stands.

While the strawberry eaters are dwelling on lingering memories of the luscious berries they ate this season, Roger Lewis is moving into a round of activities that will insure delivery of plants for production of crops in 1968 and 1969. Those he shipped this spring will bear next summer.

Under a cluster of screened frames he has growing what is known as foundation stock. He gets the seedlings for these (at about $25 per plant) from university and other research centers and sets them out in fumigated soil to make certain that they mature without falling prey to strawberry virus.

This operation is the key to his whole business. It is from this nucleus of plants that he produces what berryman call "clean stock" that can be guaranteed free of infection and pure of strain. Only such clean stock is truly productive.

which they picked fruit this season. The plants would produce another year, for many years in fact, but it is not practical for a commercial grower to rely on the productivity of aging plants. So under they go.

And as fall approaches, the soil around the acres of maturing plants will be turned mechanically and close weeded by hand before they are covered for the winter. Lewis beds down his plants in marsh hay, partially because it is free of weed seed and partially because he is convinced the nutrients in this ocean fed hay are particularly beneficial to strawberries.

Meanwhile he will be pulling carrots (and later a few parsnips) and working to wrap up as much as he can manage before his Puerto Rican hands fly home. He will have a man or two around until November and maybe even into December when the last of the carrots will go to market.

During the cold months Lewis settles down to rewriting or updating his plant catalogue and the one man who stays on duty puts the farm equipment into shape for another season.

By March Lewis is into a new cycle, digging plants as soon as

The West Andover farmer talks of retiring or cutting back production in one breath and expanding to a larger farm in the next. It is a safe bet the berries will win out.

The difference is a result of the fact that the names of newcomers have not been added to voter rolls as rapidly as names of persons moving away have been withdrawn. The registration breaks down this way: Democrats - 1,889; Republicans, 3,899; Independent or unenrolled voters - 4,061.

POTENTIAL SITE

for that end of Salem Street near the prospective Gray Road location.

Selectman Sidney P. White objected Monday to going ahead with purchase of the White (no relation) property unless it could be determined that it would be adequate as a leaching field. It was he who asked that a certified sanitary engineer be asked to make the necessary percolation tests and report in time for the board's July 25 meeting. The board agreed, some noting that these tests would have to be made eventually anyway.

No Protest

There was no protest from Manager Bowen, but he did point out that in more than a year of searching neither he nor the selectmen had been able to turn up another site for the school. Mr. White mentioned some possibilities and Bowen ticked off the objections to each, most related to the problems of sewage disposal which he said plagued most of the South end.

In the discussion, Manager Bowen told the board he has not given up hope of on-site disposal. He said construction of a package treatment plant (similar to that built for Valle's Steak House) is being considered and that it is possible the Cottage Farm land will prove adequate to take the purified affluent from this type of facility.

Bowen said the town knows that on-site disposal is impossible on the land it already holds in the area, the knoll where the school building is most likely to sit. As further information he pointed out that Mr. White has filed a subdivision plan with the Planning Board but estimated that only about half the acreage involved would meet Board of Health standards for residential construction. On-site disposal would have to be supplied as there is no sewer line proximate to the area.

Bowen announced and received confirmation for a four-man building committee to work with him on the school project. Appointed were Henry E. Graddock, 36 Lincoln Cir., a Western Electric engineer; Robert Hamilton, 4 Bannister Rd., an airlines pilot; Robert Lloyd, 24 Salem St., an architect and Phillips Academy instructor; and Robert McIntyre, 1 Carisbrooke St., a teacher-coach and chairman of the present high school building committee.

The manager said he will likely make just one additional appointment to the committee. He indicated he prefers a smaller working group than the seven-member committee which worked on plans for the new high school. Selectman White suggested a local contractor be added to the committee and Philip Allen said he thought a woman should be included. The vote on confirmation of the manager's appointments was recorded as unanimous, however Selectman White did not cast a vote.

Board Takes Lone Offer

The Board of Selectmen has accepted the $11,250 bid of Edwin Bell of Methuen for the former town infirmary on Carmel Road, subject to agreement about a time schedule for improvements to the property.

The board voted unanimous acceptance of the bid which was submitted two weeks ago and held for consideration.

Bell attended Monday's board meeting and agreed to work with Manager Richard Bowen on a list of stipulations that will set a deadline for refurbishing of the frame building.

The purchaser has said that he will seek a variance to permit remodeling of the structure into apartments. The sale is to be unconditional, however. If the Zoning Board of Appeals refuses Bell's request, he will be required to make some use of the property in accord with single residence zoning regulations. He has indicated his willingness to take this risk, stating that he believes he can present solid arguments in support of his plan. He said Monday that use of the large building for apartments would put the building back on the tax rolls and improve the neighborhood. He pointed out two weeks ago that in his opinion four or five apartments would generate less traffic than the nursing home that was operated in the building until the first of the year. He also said residents in the area tell him vagrants are using the one time infirmary.

Concerned about what Bell would do with the property if denied a zoning variance, the board asked him to agree to certain time schedules for improvements as part of the terms of the sale.

Bell's bid was the only one received.

A New England handcraft exhibition is a new feature of the North Shore Music-Theatre. The popular theatre has always featured a play of paintings by local artists but is now broadening its horizons in the arts with the permanent exhibition of New England handcrafts. The exhibition is a bright yellow and white geodesic dome on the beautifully landscaped grounds. Some of the art on display includes stained glass, meanderings in wood by Arthur Chen of Beverly, and enamels by Hy Rossman. Other artists represented are sculptor George A. Gloucester, Mary D. Reading who works in the "leatherstock" volcanic pottery Arthur Morse of Andover, and artist J. Davy of Beverly. Many of the pieces purchased by the public. The craft shop at the Music-Theatre is open every evening, Monday through Friday from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. regular evening performances are also open Wednesday evenings from 1 to 2 p.m. matinee performance. Public Funds Managed More Creatively Today

New England's state and municipal treasurers - traditionally reluctant to hold idle, "no interest" cash - are becoming increasingly sophisticated in their management of public funds, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

A study of cash management by state and local governments, reported in the Bank's monthly Business Review, ranked all six of the New England States among the nation's top 15 in their efficient use of working cash balances.

Measuring this efficiency in terms of the number of times each dollar of cash "turned over" in making payments during the year, the study showed that the region's public treasurers have consistently achieved higher ratios than the average of other state and local government units in the United States.

Connecticut, Vermont and Maine each maintained average cash turnover rates that were more than double the national average, the study revealed.

Among the factors which have stimulated public treasurers to manage their cash balances more efficiently in recent years, the report cited the rising scale of tax receipts, which have made larger amounts of cash available for short term investment - and have focused more attention on the added burden which idle cash balances place on the taxpayers.

With more to invest, the commercial banks' development of a variety of short term credit instruments - and generally higher interest rates - have made investment a more attractive option, the Bank added.

The quest for investment income has grown so intense that some municipalities have issued tax anticipation notes - which bear low interest because of their tax exempt status - in excess of their actual needs, in order to invest these additional funds in higher yielding Government bonds or certificates of deposit. Authorities on municipal finance generally agree that this is improper financial practice and a serious abuse of the tax exemption privilege. In New England and many other areas, however, the practice has been growing.

The increasing efficiency with which municipal money managers are handling their temporary cash surpluses suggests that local bankers must provide imaginative and versatile services if they are to retain the business which the deposits of their town or city governments represent, the Bank concluded.

Ensign Given Teaching Post

Ensign Charles J. Ryan, USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray V. Ryan, 19 Blood Rd., has been named instructor in English at the U. S. Naval Preparatory School, Baltimore, Md.

Following the award of bachelor of arts degree by the University of Connecticut, Ensign Ryan completed his Navy training at Officer Candidate School, Newport, R. I. He has also completed the academic requirements for the master of arts degree in English at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Handcrafts Exhibited

A New England handcrafts exhibition is a new feature at the North Shore Music-Theatre in Beverly. The popular summer theatre has always featured a display of paintings by local artists but is now broadening its activities in the arts with the new, permanent exhibition of New England handcrafts. The exhibit is housed in a bright yellow and orange geodesic dome on the theatre's beautifully landscaped grounds.

Some of the art on display includes stained glass medallions by Edythe Chen of Beverly, bird carvings in wood by Arthur Adams of Beverly, and enamelled copperware by Hy Rossman of Boston. Other artists represented are sculptor George Arons of Gloucester, Mary Daniels of Reading who works in the unusual "featherstock" volcanic material, potter Arthur Morse of Swampscott, and artist J. David Broudo of Beverly. Many of the items may be purchased by the public.

The craft shop at the Beverly Music-Theatre is open every evening, Monday through Saturday, from 7:15 to 8:15 prior to the regular evening performance. The shop is also open Wednesday afternoons from 1 to 2 prior to the matinee performance. The exhibition of New England handcrafts is sponsored by the North Shore Community Arts Foundation and has been arranged by Mrs. Robert Baron, foundation trustee, and Stephen Slane, managing director of the North Shore Music-Theatre.

1966 CASH Refunds Half Earned Already

It seems only a few weeks ago that the Andover CO-OP paid out its CASH refunds for 1965 purchases. That was the largest amount ever returned.

But look at your calendar. The year 1966 is already half gone. Thus quickly does time fly.

What this means to CO-OP shoppers is that one-half of their 1966 refunds are already earned. And they continue to build up with every purchase... no matter how small.

Here's a hot tip to non-CO-OP shoppers: July is an excellent time to get in on a good thing. There is plenty of time to build up YOUR 1966 CASH refunds.

A Test of Strength

The Andover Teachers Association does not like being regarded as or treated like a union.

There was some bristling of the organization's officials last week when members of the School Committee showed a reluctance to accept a stack of 167 signed cards as unquestionable proof that the association can speak in collective bargaining sessions for at least 84 percent of the professional employees in the public school system.

They were obviously annoyed by the committee chairman's refusal to accept the appraisal of their spokesmen (including that of a state association advisor) on the legality of certain aspects of the exclusive-agent agreement they propose along with their interpretation of just how the State Labor Relations Commission might rule on a request for a secret ballot vote.

The School Committee, however, was but doing its job.

The state's legal recognition of the right of municipal employees to bargain collectively and the decision of the local teachers' association to seek recognition under this law puts the whole relationship of the committee to the professional staff on a different footing. The informality of the past must be set aside.

No matter what the association calls itself, when it sits down to bargain it will be functioning as a union. Though it may not come to the table with the power and the threat that the power of a national union organization implies, it will not come alone. It will have the support of a rapidly expanding state association and the legal and research resources of both the Massachusetts Teachers Assn. and the National Education Assn. at its fingertips.

All the old procedures for teacher-employer dealings must be re-examined in the light of this new set of circumstances. Obviously the committee can no longer readily accept the declaration of ATA leaders, or even a stack of signed cards, as adequate proof that a majority of local teachers want a single agent to represent them when it comes time to talk wages, working conditions and the like. In the final analysis, the SLRC may not regard it as necessary for the School Committee to know by just what percentage the association speaks for the teachers. But the answer to this question is a proper concern of the school policy board.

Whether or not the SLRC sees any need of a secret ballot, giving teachers a choice between collective or individual representation, we think it would be well for the leadership of the Andover Teachers Association to agree to a vote.

If the organization were to test its strength this way, publicly, it could put to rest the rumor that it has but paper support from a goodly number of professionals who have gone along with the association thus far rather than make themselves conspicuous by dissenting. A strong majority vote would clear up the question of representation and set the stage for realistic bargaining.

An Affront To The Consumer

(Reprinted from the Wall Street Journal, July 8)

Few consumers are going to have the time, patience or stamina to wade through the 203-page report of the National Commission on Food Marketing, "Food From Farmer to Consumer." And that, in a way, is too bad.

For the report is an instructive illustration of what happens when an attempt is made to have a bipartisan Presidential panel survey, in the course of 18 months, a subject as large, complex and fast-changing as the food marketing industry. What happens is that such a commission gallops off recklessly in all directions, dropping along the way such profundities as this: "Fresh meat is a perishable product which must be moved rapidly into consumption."

If this sort of thing seems trivial to the consumer, it may be because the commission evidently doesn't think much of the consumer's mental capacity. It seems to regard him as being too obtuse to detect the report's glaring non sequiturs.

The commission's majority of nine says, for instance, that the food industry "has been, and remains, progressive in most respects. Many new and useful products have been developed; processing methods have been improved. . . . Management has been generally progressive." The industry is "one of the outstanding achievements of the American economy."

Yet at the same time the report contends that the consumer is confused by prices and by packaging, a good deal of food advertising is a waste of money, although consumers are "powerfully influenced" by it; "Impulse buying is common," indicating a lack of buying skills.

Indeed, the commission concludes that - in spite of the progressive efficiency of the food industry - consumers need, for their protection, a whole new Federal "centralized consumer agency" to keep them informed on how to buy things. And they need more Governmental controls over almost all aspects of farm marketing and retailing.

Happily, a stinging dissent by the commission's six minority members helps to put much of this nonsense into proper perspective. "There has been," observes the minority, "no consumer cataclysm that demands any sizable extension of Government into teaching consumers how to shop."

Consumers may find it worth while sending $1.25 to the Superintendent of Documents for the report's dissents alone, which fill 64 pages. After all, the report cost almost $2 million to prepare, and they ought to be curious about what they've done to deserve so costly an affront.

To the Editor of the Townsman
I had occasion last evening to see "Come Blow Your Horn" presented by the Repertory Theatre Company at the Sheraton Rolling Green Motor Inn and was most impressed with the performance. It was obvious, however, that the Repertory Theatre Company need somebody to start "blowing their horn" on their behalf judging from the very poor attendance. This is I know a non-profit association, however, they obviously do have certain expenses they have to meet.

I would like via your column to "blow the horn" on behalf of this group of talented performers and express the hope that a greater number of Andover residents will take an interest in and support their endeavors. They perform every Thursday evening and I guarantee a most enjoyable, relaxing time for all Repertory Theatre fans.

The Tax Bill

To the Editor of the Townsman
The announcement of the new tax rate of $33 by the Assessors is most opportune, coming as it does in the midst of the full scale revaluation survey currently underway. We are not told, however, whether or not, as a result of this survey, we shall retain the present base of 90% of true value, or whether the base will be raised 95% or even 100% true value. Or even whether or not the true value will be increased and still be called 90%.

Any way we look at it, simple arithmetic tells us that although our tax rate may decrease by one dollar per thousand, if the base is escalated our total tax bill will be higher all down the line!

A case such as this requires study and investigation by such groups as the Taxpayer's Association and The League of Women Voters. A report of same should be made at our next "annual" Special Town Meeting, at which gathering perhaps 349 registered voters will transact the Town's

NEW-YORK TIMES:

In the final analysis, the vagueness of the whole business - the conflicting reports, the paucity of evidence of Hanoi's plans, the lack of a reliable yardstick of progress in the war - left doubts of the kind expressed by James Reston in his New York Times column from Washington. He said:

"The question is not how Washington feels but what the enemy is doing, and nobody here can be sure; for never were so many major decisions taken here on the basis of so little information about an enemy that reacts in such different ways from our own."

Christian Science Monitor: Of late there has been major expansion in Congress's use of the "interstate commerce clause" to justify legislation reaching into many new aspects of American life. . . . There is, however, one area in which this clause could be used to excellent effect, but from which Congress has shied skittishly. . . . Its use to cleanse unions of criminal or subversive elements. . . . Seldom has the need for stronger laws been clearer or more insistent than in the case of Teamster president James Hoffa. Under an eight-year sentence conviction for jury tampering, and with other changes hanging over his head, Mr. Hoffa is just about the last person among American's nearly 200,000,000 who should be permitted to have any influence or say in union affairs.

WALL STREET JOURNAL: Now that inflation is obviously with us, it's understandable that labor unions are showing renewed interests in writing living-cost pay boosts into wage contracts. As an inflation defense, however, the so-called escalator clause is an exercise in futility. . . . A living-cost pay increase, like any wage

The Risks

To the Editor of the Townsman
Recently a group of young folks in Boston were seen in front of a public building holding signs which said in effect "War can be stopped only if we refuse to fight."

First, may I congratulate these young people on their devotion to a cause. In this instance a cause which has fascinated the young from the beginning of time. Their devotion indicates that they are concerned with improving the lot of mankind, have the courage to express publicly their convictions and, of immediate benefit to all of us are, by exercising it, making one of our basic rights, free speech, stronger.

Next let us relate their objective to the world of today: Suppose a person finds himself on top of a roof without a ladder. In trying to scale to the next roof, he fell. Then somebody erects a sign proclaiming "Falling from roof tops can be stopped only if we refuse to climb up to them."

The point here is that national living is not yet a readily understood complex whose problems can be solved by refusing to do the distasteful things that are an inevitable concomitant of progress so long as we try to better life and world.

War continues to be our lot because of our innate desire to improve. It's not something that is imposed from without. It is not something that can be avoided from within; so far at least. It is a consequence of our not being able to foresee clearly all the consequences of our efforts to improve.

When we earnestly desire to avoid war, the fact remains that progress would cease if we took the position that nothing should be done that might result in war as a side effect or that would expose the young to the risk of fighting and death. To test the efficacy of the opinion here delineated, let each sign holder, those who are making our right of free speech stronger by exercising it for us, ask himself: Would I have this right if the young people along the line of progress had not been willing to risk war and then fought to the death to obtain it for our inheritance?

boost, is part of a company's cost of doing business. If the company is to stay in business and go on providing any wages, it may well have to try to translate the pay raise into higher prices. Instead of helping the worker catch up with inflation, the cost-of-living hike thus may only make it more certain that he will lag behind.

BERKSHIRE COURIER: . . . Young Mr. Robert Emprimo - he's 13 - has some pretty definite opinions on the Viet Nam war, to which, we hasten to note, he is perfectly entitled. One point that he makes, however, is exceedingly upsetting . . . This is his statement to the effect that Americans should follow their leaders blindly, right or wrong. History is replete with horrible examples of precisely that philosophy. Nazi Germany is one that comes immediately to mind. The terrible thing about this philosophy is that it is promoted among our youth in the name of patriotism - which is no doubt how Mr. Emprimo encountered it. And its promotion these days, under the aegis of an extremely thin-skinned President who can't abide criticism of his policies, is widespread. Let us fervently hope that Mr. Emprimo's blindfolded, unquestioning "patriotism" is not indicative of what we can expect from the rising generation.

Announcement of the successful conclusion of the campaign was made by Edward M. Schuster, Andover plant campaign chairman.

Of approximately 32,000 Raytheon employees in locations throughout the country, 4,147 were enrolled in the payroll plan prior to the campaign. With 17,020 new enrollees reported, the total company enrollment, Schuster said, has now risen to 21,167 exceeding the drive goal by 32%.

Goldberg - Eggers

Miss Carol Von Eggers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preben Eggers, 5 Wild Rose Dr., became the bride of Richard Allen Goldberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Goldberg of Beverly, on June 18. The candlelight ceremony was performed by Rabbi Roth of Lawrence, at the Hillview Country Club, North Reading, where a reception followed.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk organza with white re-embroidered Alencon lace medallions and chapel train. Her French illusion veil was attached to a crown of seed pearls, and she carried a cascade of white carnations, roses and stephanotis surrounding a white orchid.

Mrs. David Johnson of Newport, R.I., was the matron of honor, and Miss Linda Bodwell of Sharon, the maid of honor. Their long Empire aqua gowns had white embroidered bodices above skirts with blue veiling. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of pink and white carnations.

Similarly dressed, the bridesmaids were Miss Susan Elder, North Adams, Miss Rita Drelb of Great Neck, L.I., N.Y., Miss Eileen Goldberg of Savannah, Ga. and the bride's sister, Miss L. Von Eggers, and Miss Mary E. McEvoy, both of Andover.

Mark Goldberg of Beverly, best man for his brother, Ushe, with another brother, Lawrence Goldberg of Beverly, were Peter Shull of New Haven, Conn. Lawrence Silverman of New York, Thomas Smith of Winthrop, Mass., Kenneth LiPorto, Thomas Lachlan and Daniel Kelly, all of Beverly.

Mrs. Eggers chose a blue and white lace gown with matching coachman coat and an orchid corsage for her daughter's wedding. The bridegroom's mother wore a pink gown with bodice embroidered with seed pearls and an orchid corsage.

Wedding guests included C. K. Frey of New Orleans, godfather of the bride, and aunt, Miss Polly Von Eggers of Copenhagen, Denmark. Mrs. Goldberg was graduated from the University of Massachusetts where she was a member of the Alpha Chi Omega Sorority. Her husband is a graduate of the same university and belongs to Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity. He is employed by the Hahlab Suedes Inc.

Following a wedding trip to Puerto Rico, the couple will be at 58 Pinckney St., Boston.

QUALITY - WHERE IT COUNTS

Attention, lobsters: If you're not tender enough for the Parker House Inn in Andover, try drowning your sorrows in butter.

As if that would make any difference.

Once we turn down a lobster, all the butter in the world wouldn't help it pass our tests for succulence and tenderness. These same high standards hold for famous Parker House rolls, chocolate cream pie, and all our other dishes.

The new-old Parker House Inn in Andover offers a newly decorated main dining room, two convivial cocktail lounges (piano-vocalist, four nights a week). Plenty of free parking, too.

Club Plants To Beautify

Members of the Spade and Trowel Garden Club recently planted the area at the intersection of School and Essex Streets as their part in the town-wide beautification effort.

Mrs. Sanford Carlisle was chairman of a committee in charge of the project. Her assistants were Mrs. Edward Miller, Mrs. Paul Mufson and Mrs. Kingman Webster.

The free-form planting near the busy railroad crossing consists of an azalea, rosy weigela, beauty bush, mock orange and three junipers, surrounding the base of an existing mountain ash.

Garden club members hope to create a colorful progression of blooms at the plot, where dusty miller and variegated hosta were also used with silver mulch to minimize upkeep.

Train Tours Are Planned

The New England division of Railroad Enthusiasts Inc. has two trips scheduled for July and August. On July 16 buffs will leave from South Station, Boston, at 8:30 a.m. for Kingston, R.I. and then travel the scenic Narragansett Pier Railroad in open gondola cars, returning to Boston at 5:15 p.m.

A month later, on Aug. 13, train buffs can leave Boston's South Station for a trip to New London via the New Haven where they will board a ferry for a relaxing cruise to Block Island.

Tickets and further information may be obtained from Roland P. Blodgett, PO Box 244 Malden or Joseph F. Lajoie, 22 Stevens St., Methuen.

City Glass Company, located at the corner of West and Tremont Streets in Lawrence has glass for all purposes. Their expert staff of workers can take care of any type of glass work quickly and efficiently. A particular feature you will appreciate is a convenient Drive-In Service for all insurance replacements on plate and auto glass, a specialty of City Glass Company. A franchised dealer for Plexi Glass, Libby Owens Ford, Pittsburgh Plate and Saftee Glass, City Glass installs auto glass, tub enclosures, store fronts, mirrors, aluminum doors and windows, table tops and mirrored sliding doors. In addition, City Glass now carries the famous Eaton water filter, guaranteed to make tap water fresh as a mountain spring. There's no need to swelter in your car from the hot summer sun. Stop in and see the Mark IV Auto Air Conditioner at City Glass Company. They can install it quickly and you can immediately eliminate heat, humidity, dust and pollen from your car. The Mark IV Monitor out-cools factory installed auto air conditioners. This was proved in road tests in the blazing Arizona sun. It starts cooling faster and cools the whole car, not just the front seat. Unlike expensive factory units, the Mark IV can simply be transferred to your next car. Owners report over 300,000 miles of dependable use in over four cars. And if you ever need service, Mark IV's 24-month, 24,000 mile warranty is good at Mark IV service centers from coast to coast. The Mark IV Monitor fits almost any car and there is no delay on installation. City Glass Company was established in 1946, and is owned and operated by George Driben, offering a complete glass service for this area. So if you have any glass that needs replacing, in either your home or car, why not call 683-3675 and inquire about the many glass services available at City Glass. Or perhaps you would be interested in the new Eaton water filter to purify your tap water, a new tub enclosure, glass table tops, or a new store front for your place of business. Mr. Driben invites you to call or visit City Glass Company, at the corner of West and Tremont Streets in Lawrence anytime. Satisfaction is guaranteed.

WANTA BUY A DUCK? Ok, but you will have to look elsewhere. This family is not for sale. The wild bird and her brood took a stroll in downtown Andover this week, stopping for a frolic on the grass at the fire station before crossing Barnard Street (as shown here) enroute to Rogers Brook. (Cole)

CIVIL SERVICE

tions. "It has been a problem with us for a long time," he said.

In his detailed statement, Manager Bowen urged that the General Court act to devise a personnel system that will make people more important than procedure. He took issue with those who regard this state's Civil Service as a merit system and/or a sound system of personnel administration. "It is neither," he charged. "It is more a mechanical thing..." he said.

Among other major points stressed -

* Bowen said he recognized that Civil Service was born out of the need to protect the capable worker from the whims of politicians. But, he argued, this negative attitude needs to be changed.

Recruitment rather than protection should be of primary concern, he stated. The manager said he is confused by what the state labels as "recruitment" and went on to explain that if they regard the placing of a sign on a bulletin board as recruitment this does not fit his description.

He stated flatly that recruitment does not exist at the local Civil Service level. "The Commonwealth does not go out and look for young men and women to seek careers in local government," he said.

* If there is to be a state Civil Service affecting local governments, it should not arbitrarily establish salaries for welfare department workers any more than it does for police or fire personnel. This is presently the case, Bowen explained.

* There should be changes in educational requirements and testing. The manager said he did not regard it as fair to expect anything less than a high school diploma for a police officer, for example.

He added the written tests should not be the single technique employed for searching out qualified persons and specifically noted that he thought potential police officers should have psychological testing. He said it was important to know how employees in sensitive positions would react under pressure.

* On veteran's preference, Bowen said at the risk of being unpopular he must suggest that to perpetuate absolute preference indefinitely takes... away from the veteran who can earn something on his own two feet. Furthermore, he said, it is unfair to the man who through no fault of his own is not a veteran.

This complaint was echoed by David Cutler, also of Andover, who identified himself as a member of the recent Task Force of industrial and business executives named by Gov. John A. Volpe to suggest ways for improving and streamlining the state government operation.

Cutler said there is a great vacuum behind the large numbers of 30-year-men now holding key state jobs and nearing retirement. He predicted that unless the state can do something to attract qualified young people into government posts, it will experience a personnel crisis when these key people retire.

The Andover man, a veteran of both World War II and the Korean War, blamed the present absolute veterans' preference for the fact that college graduates interested in government service turn away from the Commonwealth.

* Manager Bowen said the state "must be kidding" when it refers to Civil Service methods for handling disciplinary actions. "Any Civil Service employee who is dismissed for any reason is a sucker if he doesn't appeal," Bowen said. He is almost certain to be reinstated, the manager charged.

He complained that even a person under indictment for the most serious of crimes cannot be suspended.

Mrs. Jerald Cornwell, president of the Andover League of Women Voters, spoke briefly in support of the state league's position in favor of Civil Service reform.

Club Water Looks Good

Pumping tests are to be made near the 18th fairway at Andover Country Club to determine what yield the town might expect from a potential ground water supply tapped there.

Manager Richard Bowen told the Board of Selectmen Monday, however, that unless the Country Club source can produce 500,000 gallons or more of water a day, he would question the practicality of driving a well there. He also indicated that immediate use of the supply would not make fiscal sense if it can be determined that Fish Brook will produce more water next spring than Haggett's Pond can hold. He said he will report to the board in two weeks on plans for increasing the capacity of the pond.

PARKING METERS TO BE REPLACED

The town will replace its present parking meters with 350 new ones to be purchased over a three year period from meter revenues.

The Board of Selectmen approved Monday a plan submitted earlier by the town manager.

Urging action, Manager Richard Bowen said he thought it would be a waste to spend what it would cost to overhaul present meters. He said he would rather see the town abandon meters altogether than go to this expense.
